Introduction;

The Universe began, that being true, on a whim or by chance by intelligent design, we'll say God wanted it so. However, it was also most wanted that each of us enter into this existence. All could still argue why are we here? The answer to that alone may not initiate the undoing of anything. But we all do exist and it was wanted so.

The next few pages describe the (how) part of this equation, taken from visions and sufficient evidence that remain still after all this time. A vision I was fortunate to have linked me directly up with or connected me to another Angel now captured in human form. Perhaps even with an original member of this same intelligent life that was actually there when the events had taken place. I could have witnessed through this being's own eyes every angels miracle birth, or it was my own personal radiant angel captured inside me who was actually there in the beginning making me recently aware of this triggered by hints. It has to be one of them.

I say again, even if it were still argued that we exist now by chance or merely on a whim, the truth to that is it was still most wanted by some kind of intelligent life. I'll share the visions of this beginning with added evidence that does still exist.

Chapter 1

This world, like some scientist agree, began with tiny elements in space that met each other on a whim or perhaps even by chance. The truth is, they did in fact meet. These tiny little elements had just enough magnetic attraction each and when one met the other and bonded these two elements met others and they bonded, and so on and so on. The now combined magnetic attraction began to grow evenly forming a sphere. It had already been captured long before by the Sun's attention which then decided to keep this growing sphere close to it's own cradling bosom. The extreme heat generated by the Sun melted and fused these elements together evenly as it rapidly spun making it a solid, highly reactive, metallic sphere increasing the magnetic attraction now called a magnetic field. This without reason invited more elements now of other kinds to fuse with it. The more the sphere grew and matured the slower it spun and the less it needed to stay as close to it's nurturing or better yet parenting Sun. The further away it got the cooler this sphere became until it was sizable with living conditions. This world like all the others appeared as Heaven would've wanted, you'd think.

(Ok, the Big Bang science offers that created the Universe in an instant, could very well have been the disruptive echo of a great accident that changed everything in the Universe in an instant, and the instincts of this Universe kicked-in and everything in it quickly adapted for survival to this extreme change leaving existence now in ruins.)

The final elements gathered and rested on the surface of this world. Paradise was now ready.

The intelligent life first designed an array of Seraphic nursery(s), it's where angels were born. These nursery(s) were located throughout this kingdom of Heaven, the Universe even if it makes it easier still, Paradise to themselves.

Although infant like at first these angels were aware they were very much alive and also knew it was most wanted that they exist now. Knowing they were wanted kept them loving of one another. Their soft outer layer, smooth like a fine silk, housed them in a constant being. If they didn't have this their own touch would pass through another angel and they would feel nothing. That was the purpose for the soft outer layer.

The atmosphere they entered had minimal gravity, somewhat like the Earth's moon is said to have by today's measures. Yet enough so that they were constantly kept in and never wanting to leave the kingdom of Heaven, again, Paradise at it's best if you will.

From a scientific view; so they wouldn't literally float out of Heaven/Paradise and off into space, which is the main reason every planet has at least minimal gravity, and it stands to reason the true need for gravity on any planet is to keep some kind of life on it. Also, science believes the less gravity there is then the less influence it has on the motion of light, light would be ever present. Hold that thought.

Once the original wave of angels left this nursery and enjoyed their surroundings for a while the intelligent life began to nurture them without the use of words. Their soft outer layer that comforted their even more delicate inner being and its tissues still had no use for a verbal communication. In the vision telepathy had been used and was captured in words for me to understand just these few basic means of existence; (1) You are now and you will always be part of the everlasting, (2) you are all by way of extreme imagination welcomed by it in angelic form. (3) Eternity is now your home.

This same intelligent life described every and all living things to first generation of angels. The vision I had showed much less creation than what exists now. The basics of this kingdom was all that was wanted to know of. The fallout long ago that placed Heaven in ruins added volumes more of what wasn't wanted to know or learn of. These added volumes are referred to as; Knowledge of Evil.

This wave, this only generation of angels that now was grew and matured as designed and existed for eternity. They were immune to everything opposite of pure untainted bliss, being wanted and loved. This lone generation advanced quickly as this intelligent life designed it to without ever knowing of its opposites. If we humans were to exist in these advances in our modern times it would then be as scientific and futuristic as our best visionaries could have imagined centuries ahead. Instead of Medieval Kingdoms where Kings and Queens lived and monarchies often ruled. These structures were of both unique architecture yet basic designs using Universal luminescence which constantly gave light and warmth never leaving either half of any world in Heaven's Kingdom in the dark or in the cold. That was the beauty of it.

This lone generation of radiant energies still is all that there was, the nursery(s) were emptied. So many of them, it would have been easier to count the number of stars. The Universe was full, Eternity was now their home.

There is a TV program that shows how simple things are made. There should be a program that reveals how the machines are made that make these simple things. The engineering must be insane. But, I'm guessing if you were to discover who created these machines, these nursery(s) in their own right, then many probably wouldn't find that creator as interesting as what he created. Think about it.

Some may wonder when God created the Universe why did he leave one half of every world in the dark for half the day? It could very simply be that; that's just the way it is, but that isn't a good enough answer, I know. Perhaps as believed by some when this Kingdom of Heaven was instantly effected by the fallout everything was disrupted in its own way even it's beginning, and once this happened instincts of the Universe kicked in and all of everything just knew how too adjust and survive. Even the Universe itself.

In the beginning prior to the Big Bang Heaven's kingdom, which is the entire Universe, I saw this constant luminescence and warmth everywhere giving light and comfort to both halves of every world at all times. The Great event changed all that leaving outer-space now dark and cold.

I say again, science believes the less gravity there is then the less influence it has on the motion of light. So it stands to reason, since there is more gravity now then the motion of light had to have been influenced even more and disrupted. I say again, the Universe and it's once constant warm luminescence became dark and cold outer space.

People who have died and came back from death declare that where they visited for that moment not only was longer than the few minutes they were clinically dead but, it was warm, pleasant and there was light everywhere. That sounds good to me, and yes, visions showed me that too.

By the way, every accident if witnessed that released radioactive fallout, a great blast or great echo is the first of results which disrupts everything in its wake and carry's vast distances. It would even influence and disrupt the motion of light. Also, if witnessed, it would look exactly like a Big Bang. The strength of instincts would kick-in and encourage survivors to adapt amidst the ruins and go on.

(Note*; In the now of times with gravity's stronger vice over us, if there was a first generation of physical humans and they were to begin in infancy which it is one of a few beliefs, these infant humans couldn't walk, couldn't crawl and couldn't talk. They would not have lived long at all and soon died out and we wouldn't be here today to know of it. They wouldn't have been strong enough to survive in any way in any surroundings. They would have been most certainly too young to know what the natural instinct of survival was. Again it stands to reason that Gravity's vice wasn't as strong in the beginning or in Heaven like it is now, and by the way, some kind of adult intelligent life had to have been there during the first generation if we began as physical humans during infancy to properly nurture, mature and tend to them. I'll repeat myself, when the first and only generation of angels were born from this Seraphic nursery they entered an atmosphere with minimal gravity. This minimal vice would have allowed them to develop, age and grow just so much existing that way for eternity. The gravity that we are all familiar with now has a way more hardened vice on us than in the beginning, and we have become used to it. The extreme change in gravity long ago added unexpected brutal heft to everything cursing it and toughened our once thin, soft outer layer morphing it into tough skin instantly. The eve of this extreme change in gravity had to have been caused by a radioactive fallout of some kind that mutated, deformed, soured and physically aged, restricted and weathered everything else as well, that's the curse of wanting to know. It also caused the beauty of once existing eternally to be insisted more so by the dark side of science and prescribed now as a vision of hope or a clinically described delusion.)

Chapter 2

Heaven's kingdom, which is eternity and its Universe, invited everything that there was to imagination. Nothing wicked was first said to be with it. All of it was intended for expression of pure freedom both of and from this same imagination. Both male and female expressions of it, of all living things.

The Universe and it's past, present and future were all the same as one constant. All of all of it were never separated, not even by the greatest distance of yesterday or tomorrow. All of it together moved as one time.

The landscapes, the rivers, the streams, the valleys and all that had been etched into every world appeared as if God grasped them firmly with both hands and molded each leaving fingerprints.

The kind creatures and gentle beasts came from the nursery(s) as well. All living things have energy, and any living thing is angelic, defined by many as; both radiant and wanted.

The plants and vegetation were wonders of their own, like all livings things they breathed in life of the mild atmosphere. They were not of the nursery(s), they were of the surface elements, they too were wanted by imagination.

Mountains and rocks are not alive but were also wanted as if they were. Rocks and stones were some of the elements that had rested on the surface. As if they were decorative debris after God firmly grasped each world with both hands blessing it.

Again the past, present and future were constant. They moved as one, no distance from yesterday and no distance from tomorrow.

Heaven's kingdom is eternity and the Universe, Paradise still at its best. God, the first angel, existed there too.

Chapter 3

Advances in technology wanted to leave each its own Paradise and travel to other worlds and visit theirs, this was not what wanted yet. If one angel were to leave this Heaven in a vessel of their own design would it be what was not wanted? If it were true that it was not wanted then why was this vessel truly built? Perhaps it was designed to initiate knowledge of what was not wanted. To show all life in the Universe just this once how wrong it would be to know of it. God knew this moment would come. It would be brutal and difficult for all living things to understand and experience, which is why it was kept from them. But the moment had to be resolved. It would then be revealed why it was not wanted to know of. God did not want to know of it if it were revealed to his creation so he would also endure and suffer with them.

I captured this vision while drinking coffee one morning. I went to bed depressed the night before and asked this softly aloud;

“Ah man, how can I make the world a better place?”

The next morning I witnessed this vision from beginning to end at my kitchen table as if I were actually there, and penned it as a short story entitled Find Me, Eve. This is an amended excerpt from the book, this is what I saw;

This spacecraft was hovering about 500 feet above the launching pad. Everyone involved still wanted to know. A ground crew member at the control station attempted several times to contact the pilot through his radio headset. The pilot failed to hear him. He was trying to tell him that the highly reactive lithium batteries had caused an unforeseen surge in power. It had begun.

The energy was so intense that it had caused all the controls of the spacecraft to short out, spark then burst of the control panel. The pilot looked out the window and instantly knew of what was not wanted. It was too late. A bright Blue-ish, White light quickly engulfed the entire craft. What they witnessed from the control station was the same Blue-ish, White light had vanished taking the space craft with it. They instantly knew what was not wanted, it was too late.

The pilot saw everything instantly disappear outside the space craft, he didn't want to know anymore. He then cried allowed, "God, what is happening!"

Light returned and the pilot saw that the spacecraft was falling towards the earth into a wooded area. The crash was so intense that it ejected him through the window and out onto the ground. In spite of his injuries he struggled to his feet, he was still alive. He remained still a moment and for the first ever recognized pain and as if he were dying.

Everything changed instantly. There was more gravity now, the atmosphere burned with radiation. The true theme of Paradise now disrupted. He changed instantly before the Blue-ish, White light took him and brought him here, back in time. His soft outer layer comforting the angel inside him was tough skin now, and he was heavier. His inner tissues became toughened as well, his inner frame was hardened. I emphasize all theses changes were instant, without any angel ever knowing it. With an extreme change in gravity along with his severe injuries comes death. He forgot completely he was an angel, and no memory of still being in Heaven.

The space craft was embedded up against a tree. Its power source still running. There was another surge in energy and the space craft vanished as if it had never existed. No memory or evidence of this accidental time machine or its misfortune.

The pilot wandered around this wooded area, this Garden, and returned to where he last saw his space craft. The impact left this lone tree hideous in appearance, now unique from all the others. He sat down and rested up against it.

A lone couple had heard the loud thunderous noise and ventured toward it. They entered the immediate area of the radioactive fallout without being aware of it. Everything about them had changed instantly as well. No memory of what once was. They too felt the effects and were denied of knowing they were still in Heaven. They saw this man resting up against a tree and went to him.

They saw he was injured and just knew what that critical condition was, like they had always known. They looked down at him as the effects from the fallout grew. He looked up at the woman and gasped,

“Oh God, I'm dying,”

Just then he leaned his head to the side, his body went limp and he began to silently slip away, and he died.

Knowledge of Evil had instantly etched itself into their knowing, like it had been their all along. The woman turned to the man and asked,

“Why did he die before us?”

The effects from the Great Fallout echoed throughout the Universe isolating each world now as their own. Heaven was now in ruins. The incident/accident first infected Heaven which disrupted, disoriented and change everything in the Universe in an instant. A big bang would do this. Angels were captured in human form in every world, God was captured too and he now suffers with them. The enormous beasts on land, Dinosaurs perhaps, died out all together because of gravity's now extreme unkind vice. The instant added heft to these huge 100 ft tall 20,000 ton animals became too much for them to bare. They literally could no longer move, stand upright or breathe, and their large hearts could no longer beat from all the instant weight now added to their enormous being. The life was literally crushed out of them, the radioactive fallout poisoned the atmosphere as well. All creatures were now breathing death. All living things were now breathing death. They would soon drink it and eat of it.

Excerpt from the book Paradise unrest;

In today's time we have smaller Dinosaur type creatures that do exist; Elephants, rhinos, alligators, crocodiles, lizards etc. Some islands even have Kamodo dragons roaming about. This proves that with gravity's much stronger vice, (the more gravity the more weight or heft of something), nothing 100 ft. tall or 20,000 tons can exist in this environment, which is probably why no creature that size is around now. Something extreme changed gravity in an instant.

(Note*;

The instant change that had to have occurred, if you can imagine was that quick and that damaging. If I were to guess it would have been as quick as taking your next continued step while walking. Yes that quick and that unaware of it, and no memory yet of still being in Heaven. It goes for any kind of extreme change to any life form caused by trauma. Sudden, temporary loss of memory accompanies everything linked to some kind of physical and mental trauma.

I mentioned that the past, present and future were constant together, they moved through time and space as one, no yesterday and no tomorrow. When this instant extreme disruption occurred it created a great distance between yesterday and tomorrow announcing now that both the past and future do exists. Things of the past were now there and things of the future that were yet to come kept moving away as well. The ongoing echo from the fallout spread Knowledge of Evil throughout time, both past and future, and mocked and taunted the present with it. That's how extreme that instant change was. Not one angel saw it coming, they were all captured in human form. God was aware it was going to happen, but like I mentioned chose to endure and suffer and was captured as well, God I'll remind you was the first angel.)

This Great Echo was an extreme wave of added heft and negative electrical stimulation. If it were visible and witnessed in slow motion it just may appear like all the oceans attacking at once. This electromagnetic wave was clear and transparent but was felt. You couldn't see it but it had been there. It consisted of every great mishap and it's memory that had happened throughout history after the accidental fallout. This Great echo traveled instantly to and from the future and brought back every bad experience humans went on to have and all their memories of them. Some believe the English language was not invented, rather it just evolved and it took. When did any language first evolve, how and why? If it was included with the extreme change that disrupted the use of telepathy enough translating it into words, it was brought back in time by the Great Echo, no one is certain. No one can safely put a fix on it or place it's origins in the past.

Perhaps it's origins were in the Garden of Eden. Enough telepathy had translated its way of communication into words for them instantly like it did for me in this vision. Or when the Great Echo returned it implanted or uploaded into their minds the spoken language again instantly making it so as if they had been using words all along and they never questioned how and when language evolved. And of course it would have also erased memory and evidence of the damaged spacecraft, which played its role as the accidental time machine from the future which is why it had vanished. If something in the past was changed, then for the moment evidence and memory of some event in the future does not happen and is not remembered. Remember, extreme change was done in an instant without realizing or even noticing it had even happened or was different. No one would truly wonder at first either. Evidence amongst the ruins along with hints often trigger the soul to remember, and they all do eventually.

Chapter 4

Many of them struggled to find their places still in this new thing called physical life. At the moment they knew of no other kind of existence. (trauma of any kind challenges memory first). Many do not know of the truth or what happened yet. Some of them became self aware that they needed nourishment and knew what it was. They taught those that were less fortunate and confused of this. They gradually became aware of how to adapt to their surroundings and the atmosphere that kept them alive. Day turned to night and they knew their bodies had to rest, recharge and keep warm. They dreamed also. Night turned back into day and others became even more self aware, their dreams spoke to them. Then it happened.

One human, we'll call him Atom,(the scientific hand in this) was coupled with a woman named Yvette, Eve for short, (Eve is defined as; the moment immediately preceding a certain event, time before anything). They perhaps were the lone two angels who were said to have heard the loud thunderous crash in the woods. They went back to the location of the incident to see what they could learn from the death they witnessed. Every soul remembers is what their dreams were about. Atom's dreams told him this world is not what was wanted. Yvette's dream told her they were still in Heaven now in ruins.

When they entered this area they saw the now hideous tree from a short distance and attempted to approach it but were disallowed. The smell and radiating effects were just too much for their frail senses to endure. First knowing of just goodness and now knowing of wickedness added emotions and pain to their mental and physical embodiment. Science says that exposure to most kinds of radiation causes nausea, headaches and attacks the nervous system. It is known to deteriorate the insides of a human being as well, beneath the now toughened skin.

They saw that the body of the pilot was still leaning up against the hideous tree. They also witnessed a lengthy creature, a snake hanging from one of its branches. It too had been infected by the fallout with radiation and wickedness and it hissed at them aggressively spitting venom. A once docile creature was now angry and vicious in behavior. They left the area and returned to the others and spoke of what happened and how bad it would be for the others to know for themselves. The creature's nest comforting its young was destroyed by the crash when the tree was damaged.

(Here's the use of another loose scenario happening; Even if Yvette picked an apple from the hideous tree and tasted the foul taste of contamination, she could have very simply wondered why and then asked Atom why it tasted different while offering it to him as if he were to know.)

The Great Rebellion began immediately after dominance was declared, it was that simple. As well as realizing that God too was caught in human form somewhere else in time. (If I were to guess, God was captured in time nearer to the great event in the future.)

Dominance over knowledge of evil released by the accident that had occurred was a plus for the wicked, and the knowing that God too was now captured in human form and would suffer from the effects as well. But where was God? What time and place was he captured in? The accident and fallout couldn't have killed him because none of this would have happened, it would have canceled out the Great event instantly if it were to be interpreted easy enough.

They realized God was not here in their time and that Heaven was now in ruins as their souls started to remember what once was.

Escorted by talents like; able to see tomorrow and beyond it, relive yesterday as often as they chose to, able to know when and where a naïve and vulnerable soul would be alone next. Serial killers throughout history and predators of all kinds still are notorious with that talent, they simply remember.

I can't emphasize enough that the extreme change was instant. Every living thing great and small forgot about still being in Heaven, completely even for a moment. Still, like your modern day computers the physical humans went on to invent in the future, you can reboot the system and fix the problem. Advances in technology did still progress.

Chapter 5

When some souls both good and wicked dreamed of what Heaven was like they were made aware of the appreciation once shared of one another and coupled together with the memory and feeling of bliss. Their physical embodiments had changed and earthly pleasures seemed to best describe now and what once was.

Since there was just one original wave of angels born it was destined that this lone generation would exist for eternity. After the incident in the Garden of Eden and witnessing death accompanied by the fallout, it was immediately known that all shall die eventually in human form. There was no escape from it. Nature's instinct now present in both embodiments of the female and male species alike is life finding a way. It just knew how to interpret creating more lives. Each new life would replace one that was lost to death. Each birth however would capture an original angel once again in human form through nature's way this time. Each newborn was born in the fallout and not into sin.

This balance assures us that we will meet up with the future the moment the spacecraft was accidentally sent back in time placing Heaven now in ruins. We will know just how to intervene and undo it all in an instant. Life always finds a way.

(Note*; Many good and wicked souls believe they have relived and can re-enter this world over and over. Perhaps that is true. The wicked however are extremely selfish and so one dimensional they feel they will exist for all eternity just that way in human form regardless of who around them is abused or suffering. That's why members of this Rebellious cult would kill God in human form if they had a reason which is the first chance they get. They like the way everything is and are very aware they will exist now for eternity and feel they no longer need him. Instead of Heaven's kingdom, the entire Universe being restored, they would rather exist in human form, die and keep coming back because their souls will always remember these earthly pleasures, desires and perverse excitements. They believe, abuse and interpret that as reincarnation.

The term De Ja vu is expressed as; the illusion of having done something before. That term alone both benefits the belief of living another life in another time, and also the belief that being alive now reminds every soul they still are an angel in Heaven living as they once did. This time now with the same Heaven in ruins with evidence of the true Heaven still here with us. The wicked want to keep things as they presently are because like I said, they are extremely selfish and truly one dimensional.)

(Note*; Bacteria was present in the beginning, but it was not born of the nursery(s) either. It will have matured and developed more in the stronger vice of gravity and toughened atmosphere as a result of the fallout. It could not be seen yet and it could not die. It is the definition of "Life finds a way". It was a fail safe, Plan B if one were to interpret it that way. If another Fallout occurred in the future which would consume the present state we're now in and dominate us even more than bacteria, some kind of life, would instinctively survive. All bacteria are roughly microscopic, soft outer layer beings, both male and female. They don't have arms or legs but I assure you, if they needed them to survive they would simply know enough and how to grow them.

In one Bible it is written in the book of Genesis; God created Man out of the slime of the earth. Another Bible writes in its own book of Genesis; God created man out of the dust of the ground and breathed the breath of life into him. We all know that water is the main substance of life. So if you were to put it all together it would read; Water and dust make slime, and slime has bacteria in it, and bacteria thrives at room temperature. See? It just may be that simple, and, as some theorize and also believe, you would still need some kind of intelligent, adult life there to tend to all of this. Even if this bacteria were infected by the fallout and captured by gravity's stronger vice it what have known it would need to struggle even harder to survive. In order to do so and get around now it would have known instinctively to grow arms and legs. Bacteria is known to have a strong will to survive and adapt.

Science goes on to offer;

Origin and early evolution; (off of the Internet)

Further information: Timeline of evolution

The ancestors of modern bacteria were single-celled microorganisms that were the first forms of life to develop on earth, about 4 billion years ago. For about 3 billion years, all organisms were microscopic, and bacteria and archaea were the dominant forms of life. Scientists add that; bacteria fossils do exist and have been discovered.

The photo shown is a picture of one form of bacteria. The caption it was linked to off of the internet read; Origin and early evolution, of one form of bacteria. It appears almost human doesn't? Like a newly developing life inside the Mother's womb. Look at it closely, if the physical human began like in the photo as bacteria, then some kind of intelligent being(s) had to have been there to tend to it during infancy and its pre-adult stages through caring and nurturing and keep it safe.

God still couldn't be found. Many in the beginning remembered now that God wanted each of them to exist. They knew of this and they were aware that something unwanted did in fact happen which placed this same existence now in ruins and added death. I feel certain that since God too was captured by the fallout he truly didn't have to be. I also feel certain, and again I mention this, God wanted to endure the suffering and pain as his creation would for knowing of what was not wanted allowing them to realize over time that we were not cast aside. And one way or another to accept that we would return to Heaven or Heaven would be restored. He also could not be everywhere in this world at the same time, but many good souls who knew we were still in Heaven knew this and they were everywhere and still are.

I'll mention it again the way the visions have spoken to me, they all insist that God in human form would more than likely exist in the time frame nearer or closer to when the origin of the accident was first initiated. This time would be the future to the beginning, but the present or nearer future to us now.

The Great Echo I mentioned of before began in the Garden of Eden at the time of the accident. It carried vast distances, and time being the greatest distance. It reached the future and echoed back through every millisecond of time and existence displacing all memories, experiences and knowledge of evil as well, that's the curse of knowing. It also shared God's own loving and caring of us over this same great distance, that's his mercy that all the good have and carry with them. Since the beginning of all this prayers helped capture and initiate this mercy and was shared with loved ones. Loved ones who deserved it and those that just wanted to claim it. The echo displaced all of this good and wickedness evenly over the centuries, you could say it has been superimposed onto the true Heaven making it said or believed to now exist far and away. But to the many souls that remember still being in Heaven it is now to be in ruins. But don't fret, like all unwantings none of them has lasted forever.

Chapter 6

The exact date of the incident/accident in the Garden of Eden has been argued and debated often. Some have declared the accident had occurred millions of years ago when mankind was said to be threatened by enormous Dinosaurs. Some feel there is sufficient proof dating the event back to only several hundred thousands years. One option is this; The stones of the Great pyramids of Egypt were too heavy to lift by the hand of man alone. It is a belief that each stone was dragged from a nearby stone quarry and up onto one another for a period of 20 years. There is also an array of large stones that were placed in a unique decorative way in the area of England called Stonehenge. Some of these stones weigh several thousand pounds by today's measures. Stonehenge is referred to as a Prehistoric monument. There are even large stones that weigh several thousand tons and even 2 million pounds that were carved around 5,000 years ago. It has been asked; “Why?” carve stones this enormous. It has also been asked; “How?” how did people that long ago do this?

Scientist and archeologists assess these unique achievements were constructed between 2500 to 3100 BC. Since we are in the year 2010 AD that would place these Pyramids and this Prehistoric monument and enormous stones only as old as 4,500 to 5,000 years old. My point is; What if the Garden of Eden incident hadn't happened yet, what if the incident happened after these achievements and gravity too didn't increase greatly until after these Pyramids and Stonehenge were built. With less gravity during that time it would have been far more easier to lift these large stones placing them in a unique array for either. As for the Pyramids, the lesser weight of each stone the easier and quicker you can lift them, carry them and place them wherever you wanted to. Based on the considered possibility that Gravity wasn't as strong then like it is now wouldn't have taken 20 years to raise anything that great in size.

Consider it possible that the fallout in the Garden of Eden which triggered gravity's brutal vice on everything may not have happened 3,000,000 million years ago, or even only several hundred thousand years ago. Instead, consider it could have occurred between the years 2010 AD which is now, and 3100 BC which was then, roughly 5,000 years ago. That's a blink of an eye compared to eternity.

There is a scientific test done on what is believed to be ancient artifacts and discoveries, it is called Carbon dating. This carbon dating is a test that is expected to determine the approximate age of an item or solid object. If an item is actually 400 years old this test at best can determine whether it is or not. However, the age of some discoveries and artifacts could not be accurately determined by this test. Perhaps the more ancient of times these objects were said to have existed in, the fallout in the Garden of Eden hadn't occurred yet and gravity was far less strict, less pressure and no decay on anything, not as much gravity back then as there is now. Also the atmosphere was pure. If you were to construct some thing great in size with far less gravity than there is now, and suddenly change and increase the amount of gravity and pressure and then carbon test it for it's approximate age, then any scientific test(s) and it's findings will be off a great deal...even an educated guess wouldn't be close if a Great change had occurred.

There is a verse in the Bible in which it writes; “Thou shalt not know the day nor they hour...”

That could mean one of two things; (1) The date and time the incident in the Garden of Eden actually occurred shall not be known to all, or (2) the date and time in the future the incident was first initiated shall not be known to all. It's as if the traveler who goes back in time can and is allowed to be any one of us, and the date and time you go back to is the date and time that wouldn't need to be remembered anyway. Setting the Universe right and restoring it the way it was intended would erase all evidence and memory of what was not wanted. But I assure you, someone had to have documented one of the events that was first known to them, which alone would be just the accident/incident in the Garden of Eden. Because after the event was first initiated in the future nothing could be documented explaining what happened, everything was disrupted in an instant, past, present and future. To interpret better, the future event is the first misfortune which greatly disrupted the past and its history that followed leading up to now, including memory of this same future event. However, someones soul does remember.

We humans have always recorded everything in one form or the other. Ancient carvings on caves walls for example, hieroglyphics inside the great pyramids.

Religious writings in the Bible detailing that a man once had been raised up towards the Heavens by a flaming chariot. The Dead Sea Scrolls believed by some that they are the secret writings of God's own Son Jesus Christ. I am certain that someone knows something and it has been forwarded over generations triggering more than one soul to remember.

Chapter 7

The abuse for God being in human form is the constant knowing of abuse being inflicted onto every good soul by the wicked behind this Great Rebellion. The wicked remember that God had though them up as well and it was wanted they too exist, but not originally as wicked. Now they have claimed to be their own God and still no longer need him, they are certain that they alone control the world around them and one true God does not. But I assure you, since we have all been captured in human form, and we are still very much caught in the Great Echo, we have learned that we can postpone death and contain disease but we shall all still wither and die. Many continue to believe that they can re-enter this Heaven now in ruins again and again, this I mentioned. But how many who once served wicked and regret it have truly done this?

The most common forms of abuse inflicted by Great Rebellionists are very much the physical and verbal taunting and mocking of everything a good soul has been tempted of, everything they wouldn't do, have said no to and have not done. There are Ten Commandments mentioned in every Bible and every Country has it's own penal law system and a Constitution which allows some kind of freedom and peace to its people. Everything about all of these instituted doctrines is constantly mocked by the wicked, yet these same wicked souls are afraid of the boundaries that have been set. When they are caught in disregard of any written and accepted decree that concerns safety and security of others they are afraid of the disciplines and the consequences. They fear death and any physical infliction. Corruption may not have boundaries but, wickedness does.

I have come to understand that many who have engaged in this Great Rebellion have deep regrets of it. Your average person, your poverty stricken and your wealthy. Your famous people as well and I'm certain many of the unknown.

William Shakespeare wrote;

“Oh what a terrible web we weave, when we practice to deceive...”

He had to of known of this Great Rebellion to offer such a classical warning such as that. Clever he was, the safest place for Shakespeare to hide was in the past, and for the many others like him it still is. Shakespeare's warning was documented long ago and has traveled Centuries to still warn as many of us as he could leading up to our time of the regret he was left with. Why else would he have written it?

Here are a few more quotes;

“If you cant be a good example, then you'll just have to live and serve as a horrible warning...” -Catherine Aird-

*“History is a vast early warning system,”
-Norman Cousins-*

“My one purpose in life is to serve as a warning to others,”
-Jamie Zawinski-

“One reason wickedness is around could be because it has no better place else to go, it too has been captured here,” -Ernest Norman Paquin-

“The rebel can never find peace, he knows what is good and despite himself does evil, the value that supports him is never given to him once and for all...” -Albert Camus-

There are good souls in physical bodies with weaknesses, some refer to these weaknesses as a chemical imbalance. I feel it is also a conflict with the angel inside them as a result of their own personal regrets of the Great Rebellion and its addictions. They are tempted with the use of drugs and alcohol for example. Some addictions are so extreme the results lead to a controlled environment or confinement.

There are cases like the blindness of the “warm, happy drunk”. I quit drinking over 7 years ago, and I drank hard for only about a year prior to that. I began that short lived celebration spree after I wrote the time travel story entitled Find Me, Eve. The story is about time traveling back to the Garden of Eden and preventing the accident/incident which triggered the Big Bang which filled the Universe with many hazards and placed Heaven now in ruins. Every night I drank I expected a reward and to wake up the next morning to a better world. I must have been thinking selfishly for myself and it didn't happen. Or I was being mocked on a grand scale with the intention for me to just give up and consider I was being quite foolish and merely delusional that wickedness would be gone at anytime. I realize now that I wouldn't wake up to a better world in human form because I would still be in the fallout with wickedness around me still. So would everyone else. I know now when Heaven in ruins is restored it will be the true Heaven in its once pleasant condition, and not this reality only better just around me. Restoring Heaven has to be done for all. Believe me, deep down they all want that too.

There are wicked souls that supply the temptations, this is true, and then invoke abuse unto a good soul until he or she folds inside and never recovers, or reacts enough either verbally or physically to warrant the wicked's consequences. Granted this is called “to bate someone”, or “lure” more or less, and they cannot physically force their ways or means of abuse or consequences onto anyone, both the laws and Constitutions of every Country forbid that. If a large enough network of people do practice this in any Country it is declared and then dealt with as dictatorship. Which is when an abusive cult brutally displays favoritism. The Great Rebellious Cult plays favorites as well. They show little of, if any, a mock interpretation of mercy, instead it's just a mild liking about some of us. What they are attracted to is our own true mercy which they want to claim. They cannot do this if all good souls were to die.

This Great Rebellious Cult think, I repeat, they think they are trying to conquer Heaven now in ruins. And as I mentioned, many of these members were convinced at one time that they alone control the world around them and now have no need for any God they feel does not. They only feel this way because they are captured in human form and also realize that they too were wanted to exist, and will for all eternity. Just not the way think, and they are only thinking of the present moment they are now in, which is a one-dimensional adolescent curse. In human form they can only see the now. If they were more than one-dimensional they would be able to see the now as well as the then.

Chapter 8

I know now that many have encouraged me as well as others dating back to the beginning to see and feel the truth. Also to choose to join in with this rebellion and keep knowledge of evil alive, many of us will not do that. That very same truth is captured with words such as, “The truth shall set you free,”. Free from the fallout, free from the heft of gravity's vice and of course free from the Great Echo that has captured and disrupted everything. Scattered memories over centuries have been seen in the minds of both good and wicked. Good shall write them down or speak them forward indirectly only fearing consequences, wicked shall cloud or disrupt them even more directly flaunting a way of their abuse.

I have had good souls encourage my positive energy directly keeping it strong enough. Some by way of warm, pleasant inspiring words, some with a simple sincere smile with an added touch to my shoulder or arm. I now feel I placed them in harms-way when I praised them all aloud, wicked heard me mention who they were. Some have died a short time after there warm inspirations were given directly to me, and some have left the area and now live some place a safe distance away from where I am now. I cannot say I blame them.

Chapter 9

There are four seasons noted in this world that we know of, Spring, Summer, Winter and Fall. I find that Spring and Fall are truly pleasing, one says hello remember me?, the other says good bye for now but prepare for a brutal change that's coming. In some places winters are brutal. Summer disrupts temperament, perhaps by way of the extra heat which disrupts electrical stimulation in the brain is my guess. All of which return every year as an ongoing echo would. These announcements in the weather are signatures of changes as a result of the fallout. It is written that Paradise existed once in the perfect conditions, something had obviously changed all that.

Warm positive ways to accept the weather are; Thunder to some is the sound of clouds bumping into each other, Lighting is said to be Gods autograph or he is taking your picture.

Rain is said to represent his own sweet perspiration reminding us all of the effort it took to create all worlds, and a gentle breeze allows everything to sway gently as if there is less gravity like there once was.

The scientific ways are summed up as, atmospheric releases or discharges, I'll add; captured in each worlds magnetic field and gravity's hardened vice. As if all of it doesn't like Heaven now in ruins either announcing it in their own ways.

A radioactive fallout can cause extreme atmospheric change and trauma. If another fallout were to occur on top of this one it would be disastrous, catastrophic even.

There is a documented nuclear incident/accident that occurred in the land of Ukraine in the Soviet Union called, "Chernobyl".
A nuclear power plant had ruptured then exploded spilling toxic radioactivity into the atmosphere. Only one soul died instantly

(sound familiar?) Over time many others did. Some of the results lead to Children developing cancers and babies born with various deformities. Such as missing arms, missing legs, elongated, twisted appendages. This Chernobyl accident proves that there had been an extreme fallout of similar kind long before because babies had been born with various missing arms, legs and even some with twisted, elongated appendages throughout history. Some of these babies had been conjoined at the hip, at the chest and some at the head.

The area of this Chernobyl misfortune became restricted to all and is now forbidden to go there. The Bible mentions that no one now is allowed to enter the Garden of Eden. At the time of that incident/accident it is said there was a hardened glow encompassing the area. It also mentioned that a Cherubim (small angel) was placed at the mouth of the Garden with a flaming sword keeping all from entering ever again.

The evidence still exists from a fallout of some kind that actually happened long ago, Chernobyl is current evidence that still exists of a more recent fallout that actually happened as well. Both have traveled vast distances and will continue to. An echo is an echo, even if the wave of it disrupts or causes trauma through poisons in the atmosphere and genetic mutations.

Another reason for these severe storms and extreme heat waves could very well be because these events are angry that Heaven is now in ruins and express it often. It is not what was wanted, neither is their anger.

Seasonal change exists as a result of an ongoing echo. If it were not this echo captured in this world's atmosphere by gravity's stronger vice, then once the echo began and left its place of origin it would only have effected Paradise and it's perfect conditions once and left off into space never having come back around and around again every year like it does.

Some believe we are in Hell and everything repeats itself, I offer that a Great Echo does the same if it has no further away place to go. Each worlds atmosphere has trapped it's own echo.

Chapter 10

The talents both good and wicked souls have are even. If there were rules, the good honor and abide by them, the wicked acknowledge these rules do exist and apply but mock and abuse them. The beliefs differ greatly but appear similar to many at first, that's how so many are caught in between them. The Great Rebellion has never been announced but all who take an active part in it have an idea what it is, they realize after they become active in it exactly what it is. Brutal consequences are and have been inflicted unto those who directly advise others to beware, and yes, many regret taking part in the Great Rebellion and are greatly ashamed. Hence the saying, "You shouldn't judge people," or mock or taunt them after they have suffered.

Here is a list of talents, some were learned but many were finally realized;

*--The ability to see where someone is going to look next. To taunt, mock or harm them.

*--The ability to be where someone is going to be next. To taunt, mock or harm them.*

*--Telepathy, ability to communicate without the use of words. (this one has always been in practice)

*--Physical strength and lethal tactics.

*--Good has true mercy and all it's offerings, wicked want to claim it as if it were a precious gem with mystical powers.

*--The ability to look “short term” into the minds and intentions of others, (thinking positive disrupts that, but only the good have that talent.)

*--Good know we are still in Heaven now in ruins, wicked want to conquer it and then claim it to be Hell. They both are aware this is not a game.

*--Similarities in beliefs exist, but that's only because the wicked did not originally have any.

*--All were wanted to exist, but not with wickedness.

*--95% of the world's population believe God does exist, many on both sides realize that God was also captured in human form somewhere in time.

*--Both agree there was a Garden of Eden incident/accident.

*--Both adhere to Science and Religious findings and discoveries.

Chapter 11

The reality we are in now is just the only one that truly exists with what I see and feel are several deep impressions of all types of echoes disrupting it. As if the Great Echo released by the fallout that disrupted the entire Universe originally carried itself forward in time throughout all of history and returned. Even beyond the date and time of the event in the future that first initiated this. On its way back it captured both good and bad experiences of all worlds displacing them throughout this same history, I mentioned this before. Being like what this world could be if the rest of wickedness were to enter it. The more wickedness, the more impressions added to this true lone reality suggesting that alternate realities do exist. The more humans who believe that to be true, the more attention is taken away from the one true existence we are all captured in, which is Heaven the way it was intended captured by Heaven now in ruins which was not wanted.

Both existing as just this one.

Some believe that God and the Devil are having a war for the souls of all of mankind. (1) That doesn't even have any logic to it because if any kind of trauma causes temporary memory loss to any angel that God personally wanted to exist, then it would have been much easier to terminate this Devil right then and there before that interpretation of the Great Rebellion began wiping away every angels memory of him. It doesn't make any sense for God to even entertain any such rebellion like that in the first place. What some have accepted is a popular belief in a good story, and to many that's just what it is; a popular belief in a good story. A big part of your destiny is whatever keeps you safe and free of harm.

Chapter 12

Some angels in human form have banded together in secret. Both as Fraternities and Covens. (a coven is defined as; a group of witches, it is believed that there are both good witches and bad ones.) The good ones protect all society's, sometimes to defend others they have to with lethal protection. The wicked attack all society's with sharp maliciousness intent and again are deeply in fear of death and consequences. Yes, they are the pure definition of being an adolescent coward. Some of these societies and covens only protect their own and others that are like themselves. But the protection for others like themselves stop unless they become members. Loyalty insisted with a knife to each members throat. Some of these societies were created in silent opposition of organized religions. However, some organized religions do have good souls within them.

Which is why no one religion has been wiped out completely. The good souls continue to fight for these religions certain it is for the love of God's kingdom. The wicked in these religions join them for power, influence and money of course to help advance their own in this rebellion. But more importantly to stay close to God's mercy. The secret societies only grow in strength if a human's soul is either of good wanting or of wanting wickedness. Again, some of the wicked societies and covens allow some good souls to join who carry God's love and mercy always. They not only feel but are fully aware that pure sincere mercy of all kinds will insure their survival. This same mercy is easy to attain by wicked most often through a naïve, bighearted good souls. But all of it has never been claimed by any one wicked society or coven, and it never will.

Chapter 13

Time Travel has been a topic often thought of throughout the centuries. The reason I say this is; many souls have at least once told themselves and others, “if I could go back and change something I did yesterday I wouldn't be in this mess right now.” Granted that is an around about sarcastic way of thinking of time travel, but they did think of it. And it was not by coincidence that they did so, something triggered a hint of the accident long ago that placed Heaven now in ruins and their soul remembered.

I know what some are thinking; If you travel back in time with Heaven still in ruins and attempt to prevent the accident in the Garden of Eden, when you get there (1) you either will be the original cause of this event and initiate Heaven now in ruins, or (2) You will merely travel back in the alternate reality you are now in and not undo anything.

I mentioned there is only one reality and one existence, this one. Heaven as it once was is still here with us, Heaven now in ruins is with us now too. The event which triggered the Great misfortune is merely an echo. Heaven is only in ruins at the moment, not gone. If you travel back in time in this same one true existence and land safely instead of crashing, the accident will never have happened and the event will have been canceled out, in an instant. Heaven and all in it's Kingdom will be restored with no memory or evidence of being in ruins.

There are few possible ways of successful time travel;

You can travel faster than the speed of light, either go forward in time and get there before tomorrow does, instantly, or go back in time to the day before yesterday in a blink of an eye.

Travel through a wormhole which is an acceleration tunnel more or less that is thought to be connected to 2 points in time. Enter into a wormhole and the distance of time appears to be greatly reduced to a matter of seconds. Either the distance is shortened in this acceleration tunnel, or the natural pace of time is extremely quickened.

Black holes are another way it is thought to time travel, which recent astronomers have claimed they have discovered far off in space. A Black hole absorbs all light that hits it, and it reflects nothing back, not even evidence of the same light that was once there, it takes that as well. Some scientists claim that if something were to enter a black hole then would leave it's own natural place in time and be whisked away to either the past or the future. Or this something would simply be incinerated or even worse ripped apart quickly and violently. If witnessed that brutal event would have occurred in a blink of an eye.

Some believe that through deep meditation you can link up by way of telepathy with some other soul in the past or future and change something about fate for their benefit, they can do the same for you. It is also possible that you can link up with yourself and make what would appear to be simple changes, and at the time you made them you never truly understood why. Didn't even second guess them. You may or may not be able to instantly change great catastrophic events in your life. Heavens, you may have already done so which would explain the nightmares you have had, and the De Ja vu experiences. I call these common things echoes of your soul remembering of what once was, still is, or what could have been.

My ideal time machine is briefly describe as a simple design in my book Find Me, Eve. I will now describe it further.

It is a compact and mobile vehicle. It operates with a Lithium battery source and is always kept at a constant 100% charge with a basic alternator assembly found in every car or truck. The alternator feeds off of the Lithium batteries and they in turn re-feed the alternator. An alternator is an mechanical part that has a belt attached to it's pulley system which is attached to another pulley attached to a second alternator affixed to the battery case. The Power from the batteries drive or better yet initiates revolutions in one pulley causing friction to the magnets encased in copper wire generating electricity. This generates electricity to the second pulley that's attached to its alternator. The electric current is sent through heavy gauged wires that are connected to the battery case that houses all the connected batteries. It is a constant 100% charge. You can attach a lever that controls the speed of revolutions in case you're in fear of an unexpected surge in power. The more power, the more magnetic energy created. The rest of the mechanical parts consist of other highly reactive metals which house bigger magnets encased in copper wire. A compass and a GPS positional tracking device locate the area you wish to travel to. Since the past, present and future were never separated in the beginning and moved all together as one constant. The magnetic field of the earth acts more or less as it's own soul, and if you can believe it it remembers every event that has ever happened. The energy from these events, their spirits you could say, remain etched on the earth and captured in its atmosphere by way of their own unique signatures. These events happened on earth and the energy cannot leave it's atmosphere. They release then leave a residual echo, and these echoes carry vast distances with time being the greatest distance. (Residual in part means; a part of something that remains.) For example; If an event had occurred 100 years ago, then it's residual signature is still there. They have devices that can detect radiation even small traces of it. Radiation is relative to a fallout of some kind of (unwanted) energy that had been released. You can lead or even bring your time machine to that particular place in today's date and with your safe control of magnetic power and detection device you can calibrate the sensitivity level on it and how far you have to go back in time. The less radioactive signal there is the further back in time you have to go to get a stronger one. Once the radioactive levels is at its only once extreme 100% peak you've time traveled back as far as you had to go. You can adjust the timing to the time machine before you travel anywhere so it would start to slow down prior to its destination and not miss it's mark. There's your exact time, date and immediate area if you were to time travel there. And I'm certain that electronic devices do exist that can link with these events that have happened in the past. Just have an on-board computer that can translate the mathematical language of the residual signatures left by any one of these events, (the language is; The energy's one time 100% peak level which is the exact date, time and location) and a GPS directional device. If a simple compass can always link with the ever present signature of magnetic North, then I'm certain an advanced electronic device can link with this same magnetic field and search it's history for any uncommon spikes that have occurred and match the residual signature that remains with the original signature of the event. So, just build one of these time machines and go, but always practice safety and security first.

Chapter 14

Money has to an accepted monetary system for more than just our world. It's simple really; In the 1980's the population for the entire Earth was approximately 5,000,000,000 Billion give or take. In the year now of 2010 the Earth's approximate population is nearer to 6,800,000,000 Billion again give or take. In the 1980's prices for everything was low, today these same prices are crazy high. There are more souls captured in human form now than there was then so logic offers; There is more costs to tend to these extra 1.8 Billion humans, but there should be no reason for higher prices...Unless of course we are in financial competition with other worlds that use a similar monetary system. To add to that, there could be less souls nowadays on other worlds for whatever the reason which would explain the increase in ours. Every physical being is born with a soul, energy, and the soul is everlasting so it had to re-enter somewhere. The Great disruption that occurred long ago in the Universe now insists on that. Once thought up you can never leave or even escape existence, so you have to re-enter somewhere else, some other place and time perhaps.

Technology can counterfeit most everything by way of synthetic design which is cheap and effective. Also, since Heaven is now in ruins large amounts of money is dominance over a large amount of people. It's as if that would be the only true need for it.

I mentioned in the beginning there was just one lone generation of angels born, the nursery(s) were emptied. Every world had it's own nursery(s). So, if a radiant angel, or one's soul now, never fades or never dies, then there are angels/souls captured in some kind of Human or humanoid form elsewhere on other worlds. Creatures of all kinds have an energy inside them, so that has to be a soul as well. It is believed that the Animal species has an element of dominance.

Throughout the Universe still, there were as many souls in the beginning as there is now in the year 2010. There has to be since an angel or soul is everlasting, and it cannot be displaced, it has to exist somewhere. Again it is believed to re-enter life and is captured by Nature's way now in human or humanoid form. Perhaps even creature -like.

I mentioned that Heaven's kingdom is this Universe and everything in it, it is simply just that. And before the Big Bang and the fallout had changed all that, nothing had a price on it, and not one soul in the Universe was dominated over.

Conclusion;

Like the Title says, this manuscript is all based on visions and evidence that still exists. I am not the only soul who has these visions or knows of this evidence. They say that if any one person is traumatized enough their perception hones or sharpens. Their clarity of understanding cues matures and then they rid themselves of selfish, adolescent wants and ways. Some may not even be wicked anymore, but the many that still are choose to stay that way.

Cues; psychology- response-producing stimulus: a stimulus or pattern of stimuli, often not consciously perceived, that results in a specific learned behavioral response.

The majority of souls in this world have been traumatized, and we have been traumatized by the Great Rebellious Cult members and their attempt at Dominance of all living things, their mercy and this same Heaven now in ruins. They can never do that and they know it, because without any kind of mercy this Hell of theirs would be completely wicked and there would be just one generation within this dwelling and it would die out. But since they want to claim all of mercy and dominate those who have it, it just wouldn't be Hell enough for the wicked now would it. There is no Hell, just the curse of adolescence. Science offers that The entire Universe is still in it's adolescence, I can't imagine why.

Heaven is now in ruins, it can be fixed.

My own quotes;

“One reason children are hated by some adults that are wicked and loved by the majority who are not, is the abundance of mercy and love they are able to hold onto while young, it's the same amount God always carries with him...”

“The only true need for gravity on any planet is to keep some kind of life on it...”

“Eternity is our home...”

“A big part of your destiny is whatever keeps you safe and free of harm...”

“It's simple, good souls have mercy within their being, wicked souls do not, if good souls didn't have any mercy and were still good, wicked souls would already have been put to an end long ago and would have never began this Great Rebellion, it would have been silenced at its first mentioning...”

“If the Big Bang did happen in an instant, you have to consider that it didn't create the Universe and all of existence, it changed and disrupted it.”

“Long ago it was believed that our world was the center of the Universe, based on that if it were true, then if you disrupt the center of anything evenly, the fallout and echo would be evenly displaced carrying vast distances which would with certainty disrupt everything else, a Big Bang would do that in an instant.”

“The Big Bang could have easily disrupted and captured everything in the Universe into something else, like each world now captured in its own solar system.”
